Trump gets royal treatment from queen on UK state visit

The president, however, called London Mayor Sadiq Khan a “stone-cold loser.”

Donald Trump and Queen Elizabeth hailed the bonds between the United States and the United Kingdom on Monday after the president was feted with a day of pomp designed to bolster an alliance strained by discord over Brexit and China.

Trump's interventions into Britain's political crisis over Brexit had threatened to overshadow his state visit to London but instead the president appeared to relish the royal red carpet that his hosts laid out for him and wife Melania.

The three-day trip was cast as a chance to celebrate Britain's “special relationship” with the U.S., boost trade links in a post-Brexit world and reaffirm security cooperation ahead of the 75th anniversary of the allied D-Day landings in World War II.

“The bond between our nations was forever sealed in that great crusade,” Trump said in a speech at the lavish banquet at Buckingham Palace.

“As we honor our shared victory and heritage, we affirm the common values that will unite us long into the future: freedom, sovereignty, self-determination, the rule of law and reference for the rights given to us by almighty God.”

“The bond between our nations was forever sealed in that great crusade.”

President Trump

While the proudly unpredictable 45th U.S. president lavished praise on the 93-year-old queen, his views on Britain's exit from the E.U., on the possible successor to Theresa May as British prime minister and a row over China's Huawei have cast a pall over the visit.

Even as he flew into London, he reignited a feud with Mayor Sadiq Khan — who had written on Sunday that Britain should not be rolling out the red carpet for Trump — describing the mayor as a “stone-cold loser.”

The state visit was promised by May back in January 2017 when she became the first foreign leader to meet Trump after he took office.

The first day of such a visit is customarily engagements and ceremonies.

At Buckingham Palace, Melania — in an elegant, white below-the-knee Dolce & Gabbana dress with navy blue collar and belt and a custom hat by Herve Pierre — stood alongside the queen and Charles' wife Camilla, while Charles and the president inspected the guard.

After lunch with Elizabeth and other senior royals, the queen gave the Trumps a guided tour of artifacts of American historical interest from the royal collection. She also showed him some of her family's golfing memorabilia in a nod to the president who owns two Scottish golf courses.

The queen's second son Prince Andrew then accompanied him to Westminster Abbey, coronation church of English monarchs for 1,000 years, where he laid a wreath at the Grave of the Unknown Warrior, before tea with Prince Charles at his home, Clarence House.

The day culminated with the opulent formal dinner, where men wear white-tie coats with tails and women, evening gowns.

COMMON VALUES

“Mr. President, as we look to the future, I am confident that our common values and shared interests will continue to unite us,” the queen said.

“Tonight we celebrate an alliance that has helped to ensure the safety and prosperity of both our peoples for decades, and which I believe will endure for many years to come.”

In response, Trump heralded the British monarch, saying she “embodied the spirit of dignity, duty and patriotism that beats proudly in every British heart.”

Away from the pageantry, Trump has already waded into Britain's turbulent domestic politics, where more than a dozen candidates are vying to replace May, who announced last month she was quitting after failing to get her E.U. divorce deal through parliament. REUTERS

NFL to review video of Cowboys' Elliott altercation

2 The NFL likely will investigate an altercation between Dallas Cowboys running back Ezekiel Elliott and a security officer to determine whether Elliott violated any terms of a previous suspension agreement, Yahoo Sports reported. Gossip website TMZ posted a video last Monday showing events that took place early May 18 at the Electric Daisy Carnival festival in Las Vegas. The video shows a man identified as Elliott pushing a security guard against a metal railing, and he falls. Elliott then is handcuffed but not arrested. An NFL source told Yahoo Sports that the video is reviewable under the league's personal conduct policy, especially given Elliott's previous six-game suspension after the NFL investigated allegations of abuse made by a former girlfriend. Last week, team owner Jerry Jones said he didn't expect Elliott to face any discipline and downplayed the incident. REUTERS

Sephora to shut stores for diversity training

3 LVMH's Sephora beauty chain said it will close all its U.S. stores, distribution centers and corporate offices for an hour on Wednesday to conduct diversity training for employees, a move that follows a racial incident involving a Grammy-nominated singer. R&B singer SZA, who is black, said in April she was racially profiled at a Sephora store in Calabasas, California. “We have been informed of an incident at our Calabasas store and in addition to reaching out to SZA directly, we are gathering more information about the incident in order to take the proper next steps,” Sephora said in a statement emailed to Reuters. “We take complaints like this very seriously. Profiling on the basis of race is not tolerated at Sephora.” SZA said a Sephora employee she identified as “Sandy” called security to make sure the singer was not stealing from the store. REUTERS

Mexico draws asylum red line before US talks

4 Mexico on Monday said it would reject a U.S. idea to take in all Central American asylum seekers if it is raised at talks this week with the Trump administration, which has threatened to impose tariffs if Mexico does not crack down on illegal immigration. President Donald Trump last week said he will impose a blanket tariff on Mexican imports from June 10 to try to pressure Mexico to tackle large flows of migrants passing through en route to the United States. The threat roiled global markets, which are already suffering from a trade war between the U.S. and China. The price of oil fell on Monday as trade disputes with the two countries deepened concerns about weakening global crude demand. Mexican Foreign Minister Marcelo Ebrard said the country is committed to continuing to work to keep illegal immigrants from Central America from reaching the U.S. border. REUTERS

Spacey appears in Nantucket court for sex assault hearing

The disgraced actor denied indecent assault charges in January.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

Disgraced former "House of Cards" star Kevin Spacey's lawyers demanded that the accuser's cellphone be turned over to the defense during a hearing on sexual assault charges on Monday.

Spacey pleaded not guilty to charges of groping an 18-year-old busboy at a Nantucket bar during the summer of 2016 in an arraignment in January. His lawyer dismissed the felony sexual assault charges as "patently false."

Brian Kearney issued a criminal complaint of indecent assault and battery against Kevin S.

Fowler, also known as Kevin Spacey, on Dec. 20, 2018. In the complaint, the victim told police Spacey allegedly bought him drinks after he got off work at Club Car bar. Spacey reportedly asked the teen about his penis size. The report claims that Spacey then tried to convince him to come back to his house for an after-party, before reaching through his pants and touching the teen.

Spacey's lawyer already persuaded Judge Thomas Barrett to order the teen to preserve all data from his cellphone for six months following the July 7, 2016, incident. According to police, the busboy exchanged numerous text messages and Snapchat videos with his then-girlfriend about his interactions with Spacey at the Club Car bar, but never specifically mentioned the alleged assault.

Spacey's career fell apart following a slew of sexual assault and harassment allegations in November 2017.

Netflix killed off his "House of Cards" character and fired Spacey in the wake of multiple sexual harassment claims from former and current "House of Cards" production staff.

According to the Boston Globe, the victim's family have not filed a lawsuit, but are being represented by Boston attorney Mitchell Garabedian, who is well known for representing hundreds of clergy sex abuse victims.

The charge carries penalties of up to five years in prison or up to 2-1/2 years in jail and would require Spacey to register as a sex offender.

NEW AMERICANS

Are you going places? Or looking for places to go?

Managing your benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH) alone may not be enough. If you are on BPH therapy and visiting the bathroom frequently, you may have an overactive bladder (OAB).

The immediate need to 'go' interrupts your day and night – and it may not be caused by your BPH.

- Do you have to use the bathroom at least 8 times a day?
- Do you still wake up 2 or more times each night to use the bathroom?
- Do you experience a need to use the bathroom immediately (urinary urgency)?

If these symptoms disrupt your day and night, you may also have a condition called OAB.

A clinical research study is testing the safety and effectiveness of an investigational drug in men on BPH therapy experiencing OAB symptoms. Over 1000 participants in over 135 study centers across North America and Europe are expected to take part in the COURAGE Study.

FANTASTIC
PC CASE MODS
AT COMPUTEX
2019

From "Game of Thrones" to Pokémon, the Taiwanese fair was filled with incredible customized cases.

NORMAN GUTIÉRREZ
letters@metro.us

Any tech hardware fair worthy of recognition will showcase extraordinary case mods and overclocking. Computex Taiwan was no different. We were able to see dozens of PCs specially designed to look, shine and be one of the main attractions of this fair. Here are the best ones.

THE SCORPION KING

This insect manufactured for Asian company iGame has an impressive exoskeleton, although with a Core i3 and 8 GB of RAM, it's more for looks than performance. But, it does sting: the GPU is a GTX 2080 Vulcan X OC.

DETECTIVE PIKACHU

Pokémon is literally everywhere these days, and this Level 20 Thermaltake case is proof of that: with first-generation starters — Bulbasaur, Squirtle and Charmander — on one side and a bomb similar to a pokeball, this model traveled from the United States to battle at Computex. Honorable mention to the Detective Pikachu sign on the inside face of the front.

COLD BEER

Who can refuse a delicious glass of beer? This case, decorated in the shape of a well-known brand of beer, is fully functional as a PC and as a dispenser, with everything including a tower, CO2 tank and adapter for the barrel. Useful for those game nights with friends, probably with more than one fallen in battle (in the broad sense of the word). Difficult not to be tempted.

THE STEAMPUNK TYPEWRITER

This prototype seems taken from "Bioshock: Infinite" or an episode of "Penny Dreadful," and is as fantastic as impossible. Apart from the mechanical keyboard in the actual case, this all-in-one has liquid cooling with copper tubes, valves that control the temperature of the equipment and G.Skill Trident Z Royal memories, which bring a touch of elegance to the assembly.

THE IRON THRONE

"Game of Thrones" fans can now have a more interactive experience with the already melted-down Iron Throne. With a liquid cooling system from Taiwanese Bitpower and manufactured by YJ Mod, Drogon's warm breath is no heat for it.

Superhero fever leads to creation of more diverse characters 2019 became the year of superheroes in cinema, with 11 films of the genre released, and others preparing to entertain audiences next year. Will these movies save the world or make it a better place? Metro investigates.

DANIEL CASILLAS
letters@metro.us

Just in the last 10 years, the film industry has been invaded by the superhero genre with more than 41 movies, some of which have become blockbusters. In fact, five of the top 10 worldwide blockbusters of all time star superheroes. And the latest one, based on Marvel comics characters, is close to becoming the most profitable movie in the world — unseating “Avatar,” which has been heading the list for more than 10 years.

With only $99 million behind “Avatar,” “The Avengers” fourth installment already has gained $2.7 billion at the global box office. A minimal difference from the $2.8 billion Avatar harvested during its almost eight months of presence in theaters.

For the next few years it is expected that superhero fever will continue, with 10 films based on comic characters scheduled to be released next year. In fact, there are already some movies planned for 2021.

The success of comics in cinema has led their characters to conquer new spaces, which have resulted in an almost omnipresence of superheroes and villains in the world of entertainment. There are thousands of toys, books, shows, party supplies and even amusement park games featuring them.

This success has also led to the emergence of new superheroes and even comics companies that seek to create characters different from those that already exist. Such is the case of Sha Nazir, a Scot who decided to create BHP Comics, frustrated by the lack of South Asians as leading characters or as illustrators. Nazir believes that comics and their characters should be a reflection of society.

“We should have mirroring in our society, the reflection of the world we live in. It has happened in film and TV industries a little more the past few years, but comics are only just catching up,” Nazir told Metro.

But the over-saturation of superheroes, especially in cinema, has led to a greater, although slow, diversity in comic characters and films. With examples like “Thor” as a female character in some Marvel comics, an African-American “Spider-Man” and even a film like “Black Panther,” in which most of the actors are African-Americans.

It's looking more and more like the Celtics will build around Jayson Tatum and Jaylen Brown.

GETTY IMAGES

FUTURE OF CELTICS COMING INTO FOCUS

Most everyone anticipates Kyrie Irving leaving the Celtics in less than a month.

Few care.

Boston fans have seen enough of Mr. Moody, and the Celtics' front office now seems fully prepared to put the Kyrie experience in the rearview mirror as well.

Reports over the weekend suggested that the Celtics are not going to be hot and heavy for Anthony Davis, and the only way Davis is coming here is if Kyrie were willing to re-sign.

The disinterest in Davis suggests that Danny Ainge is ready to let Irving walk.

No doubt, a Davis trade was going to be one risky move as there was no guarantee that Davis would re-sign here, long-term. And in a Davis deal, the Celtics likely would have parted with both Jayson Tatum and Jaylen Brown.

Under most circumstances, letting a perennial All-Star in

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is the National Sports Editor and a columnist at Metro US. Follow him on Twitter @burke_metro Kyrie walk, losing out on obtaining a top 5 player in Davis, and being happy about it is sheer lunacy. I mean, what fan base does not want an immediate and legit shot at winning a championship?

But nearly unanimously, Celtics fans on the street right now will tell you that the way to go is to take a long-term approach, and that approach includes building around Tatum and Brown.

Basketball Insiders reporter Steve Kyler touched on this this past weekend, and it should excite those who are against a quick fix.

"The Celtics have been actively exploring trades and draft scenarios for players that would better line up with a future built around Tatum and Brown," Kyler tweeted. "Sources close to the team are skeptical that they can get Irving back but remain open to re-signing him."

Are the kids good enough?

Celtics fans crave the organic experience that they did not entirely get during the last championship window with Kevin Garnett and Ray Allen as cornerstones. Fans want to watch Tatum and Brown blossom into the top 20 players that Garnett and Allen were then, and that Kyrie and Davis are now.

There is, of course, no guarantee that Tatum and Brown will ever reach that status. Put the odds at 50 percent for Tatum, and slightly less for Brown.

Key to their progression will be Brad Stevens, who greatly boosted the stocks of Isaiah Thomas, Avery Bradley, Jae Crowder and Evan Turner a few years back.

Stevens' gift is getting young players and average talents to buy into his system. He has proven that he can raise certain players' games.

Now the baby-faced coach has had the worst season of his professional career in 2018-19, in large part because he couldn't manage an already established star. But this was really his first time with a chance to do so, and you would think someone as smart as Stevens would be able to handle it the next time he got a chance.

Of course, Boston fans have a tendency to overrate young, home-grown players. The Celtics survived without Al Jefferson, though. The Patriots survived without Malcolm Butler. The Red Sox survived without Jacoby Ellsbury. And the Bruins are doing just fine without Tyler Seguin right now.

However, I truly believe that Tatum and Brown are different cats. In this case, the sky is the limit for both of them.

If Tatum can improve his handle and his ability to get to the free-throw line, he can be a top 20 player in the league as soon as next season. If Brown can find some level of consistency and improve his shooting, he can make the Eastern Conference All-Star team next season.

We're just scratching the surface with both of them as Tatum is 21 and Brown is 22. Both were top 3 picks in the NBA Draft.

When you remember that Steph Curry was picked seventh overall, Paul Pierce was picked 10th overall, Kobe Bryant was picked 13th overall, Giannis Antetokounmpo was picked 15th overall and Kawhi Leonard was picked 15th overall, you get your hopes up for players like Tatum and Brown who were drafted higher. Crazy enough as it is now, but Tatum and Brown were more highly thought of coming out of college than all of those future Hall of Famers above.

It is not a hometown honk take to say that Tatum and Brown are capable of becoming Hall of Fame players. With Kyrie headed elsewhere, Celtics fans are more than ready and excited to find out if they are.

Women's WC betting opportunities

VSIN

An already busy summer sports betting schedule will soon be joined by the 2019 Women's World Cup. Host France and the United States are co-favorites entering the event, which begins Friday in Paris.

A few notes of importance:

"This year's event has expanded to 24 teams (beginning with six groups of four). In practical terms, all that did was bring in a few newcomers with little chance of competing. That does open the door for serious handicappers to find value. Oddsmakers can only guess how bad teams like Thailand, Jamaica and South Africa are going to be.

*Among the most respected entries, a composite of offshore odds to win the world championship are currently showing USA 7/2, France 7/2, Germany 11/2, England 13/2, Netherlands 12/1, Japan 14/1, Australia and Brazil each at 18/1.

"Because World Cup draws are only seeded to spread out the superpowers in group play — not to create maximum drama — co-favorites France and the USA will very likely meet in the quarterfinals! Sharps have been closely studying possible dark horses with easier pathways from the other side (like Germany and the Netherlands).

"If you're new to soccer betting, the most common game option is what's called a "three-way" moneyline. A price is offered for each team individually, and also for a draw. Friday's tournament opener currently has heavily favored France at -650 to defeat South Korea (risk $650 to win $100, or anything in that ratio); the underdog to win outright at +2500 (risk $100 on South Korea to win $2,500); and +740 on the draw (risk $100 to win $740 that the game will be tied when the ref blows the final whistle). Once the knockout round begins, the "draw" will apply to the end of regulation after injury time, not to overtime periods.

We'll talk more about World Cup betting strategy deeper into the event. For now, focus your research (and game watching) on finding problem areas in defense and goaltending.

Aries Don't rely on others when you are capable of doing things on your own. A chance to advance will depend on your ability to take on challenges and solve problems.

Taurus Keep moving forward with your plans. Don't let anyone sidetrack you with emotional meddling. Assess situations quickly and do whatever it takes to get good results.

Gemini Trust your instincts, not what someone else would like you to believe. Don't share your feelings with people who meddle or ask too many personal questions. Look for opportunities and avoid excessive behavior.

Cancer Stay focused on what you need to achieve. Working alongside people who are as dedicated as you are will speed things up. An interesting offer will give you something to look forward to.

Leo Stand by people who share your beliefs. Working in unison with others will bring the highest returns. Compromise will help you build strong alliances and a secure future.

Virgo Participate in activities that will encourage you to network and rub shoulders with people who can help you bring about much-needed change. Learn from experience and push forward.

Libra Check out your options before you make a move. Consider what or who is holding you back and make a focused effort to ward off interference.

Scorpio Take a leap forward. Much can be accomplished if you trust and believe in yourself and your ability to get things done. If you pay attention to someone you love, you'll enhance your personal life.

Sagittarius Keep your life simple. Don't let drama or extravagance disrupt your day. Use your skills to make your life better. Upgrade your qualifications to fit current economic trends.

Capricorn Change begins within. Consider what you want to improve, and share your thoughts with people whose approval you need. Love and physical improvements are highlighted.

Aquarius Get together with people who have something to contribute. Mull over ideas and proposals carefully, and eliminate any ideas that aren't realistic. Start small and build something concrete.

Pisces If you contact a former co-worker, you will be offered information that will help you make an instrumental change to the way you earn your living or handle your finances. EUGENIA LAST
